OKLAHOMA CITY Scott Tinker, producer of the documentary Switch, will discuss how the energy industry and resources are changing and what it could mean for the future, at 1:30 p.m. April 15 at the Oklahoma City University Meinders School of Business.

Tinker, director of the Bureau of Economic Geology, professor at the University of Texas at Austin, will give a presentation titled "Sustainable Energy Transitions."

His film Switch has been screened in more than 50 countries to more than 15 million viewers. The documentary is about the current state of global energy.

The presentation at OCU is co-hosted by the university and Ascent Resources. The event is free to the public, but reservations are encouraged at okcu.edu/tinker.
